On "The Manner of Life"

It is not so much how the girls do their hair. I have ceased to consider the great question. How high their skirts may be, or how they may be dressed, is a matter of personality. I reckon they behave about as well as they did fifty years ago, so far as all serious things are concerned. It is only the minor matters that trouble me. I am sure they are not as good as they were, but I am sure they are not as bad as they were.

What concerns me is their boldness, impudence, and manner of speech. I don't care who may assail my statements, I believe that girls are not as good as they were, but I am sure they are not as bad as they were. I have assumed boldness that is not becoming either in boys or girls. That neighbor's girl swears. She has all the slang that is going. She has a lingo of smartness with the boys. She answers to the name of "kiddo". She chews gum. She rolls down her stockings so that her bare legs show. She wears a petticoat. She affects lankiness. She laughs loudly in public. She talks at a high pitch in street cars. She has no regard for her elders. She pushes her way about with a fierce self-assurance. She is a terror to the household. She has no offense over doubtful remarks. She powders and paints and uses lipsticks.

This is all the aftermath of the war and the soldiering that ensued? I have a sort of a notion that the climax of it has passed or I did have until the other night when I went to the sixteen and a crowd of young people to the motion picture. I was one of the few to come in and disturb the whole show. I never saw people so indignant. They were talking all around me about it and if those girls could have known that they were being so indignant, they would have lowered their voices and ceased their rude laughter and conversation.

I don't know whether these were school girls or not. I hope not, for it would be a fearful indictment of schools. Many a person has won his life in life by charming manner. It is said that Mirabeau, the great French orator was the ugliest man in personal appearance that ever lived. It was said also that he could charm any man, being man or woman, by his manner. Cyrano de Bergerac had an enormous nose, but his voice of sweetness, his cadences of golden values were enough to win his way. His politeness was a living. I wish to see these young people making in copying the unmanly and repellent ways of life. Most of this "indignity" is only a cloak for lack of education and no case of address, no gentleness or comeliness, seeks to hide it under a brusque, rough, smart and slangy line of small talk that is supposed to carry him along.

The magazines and newspapers are largely responsible for it. Too many of the heroes are of this sort. They are represented as rough diamonds with clean and shining souls but with no manners. What hurt would manners and decency do them? And impoliteness is not a matter of talk, as such. Poor English does not enter into it; it is forwardness, freshness, rudeness, lack of consideration for others that we deplore.

WEST SUMMER

The schools in town began Sept. 4. Mr. and Mrs. James Boyle started Wednesday on their summer trip to the West. When he sees some neighbor at the mud, he detours to avoid him.

In fact, if he stood on the shore and saw the ship of state sinking, he would never offer to throw a line. And if all mankind was fashioned from this same kind of a chap, what would happen? There would be no hospitals for the sick, no churches, no institutions for the unfortunate, no progress. If you are about to become a useless "good citizen" read this again.

DIP SHEEP TO KILL LICE

Dipping is the only practical method for ridding sheep of both biting and sucking lice. Three kinds of materials that have proved effective against sheep lice are arsenical, coal-tar creosote, and tobacco or nicotine dips. An arsenical dip is the most efficient, although since it is so poisonous great precautions must be taken when using it. Properly prepared dips are on the market, and those advised by the Government for dipping cattle for southern fever ticks are all right for dipping sheep for lice.

Annual Meeting of Fish and Game Association—Sunday School Picnic—Rally Held—Attended—Great Oaks Camp Closed—Annual Church Sale—Miss Loeisier to Attend School in New Jersey—Funeral of John Kemp.

The annual meeting of the Lake Thompson Fish and Game Association was held last week, Wednesday evening, at the Lake Thompson Hotel. The attendance was large and the program was well planned. The orchestra music was fine. Remarks by Arthur Walker, Robert Maxey and Leon V. Walker of Portland were listened to with interest. Instrumental music by the orchestra was also given. Recitation in costume by Virginia Holden and solo by Mrs. Ethel Hirst were all very pleasing. Baked bean supper and dance followed, which were well patronized. E. L. Greenleaf has begun work on his new barn.

About thirty-five children and adults gathered in the "Holden" grove, on Saturday, for the annual picnic of the Free Baptist S. S. and invited friends. A pleasant day made the occasion enjoyable. After the dinner was enjoyed with ice cream and lemonade, the children and young people played games and enjoyed bathing until the hour for home going came.

The Republican rally, held at the Town Hall last Friday evening, was well attended. The speakers were Hon. Bird J. Vincent from Michigan, M. of C. Miss Gail Laughlin, member of Maine House of Representatives, and Raymond S. Oakes from Michigan, member of Maine Senate, all well informed, and interesting speakers.

The "Great Oaks" camp boys all returned to their homes last week. J. Becker, proprietor, and family, remain for a few days longer.

The F. B. Church Circle held their annual sale and supper, recently, with an attendance of about 100 people. Good attendance and good sales were made. It was said also that one hundred dollars was realized after bills were paid.

Arquette Loeisier left home last Tuesday to join her sister, Amy, at the Spring House in Poland, where she has been employed this summer, and from there they took the evening train to New York, N. Y., to attend school.

Miss Amy to teach where she was employed the past year.

Funeral services were held at the F. B. church on Tuesday forenoon of last week for John Kemp, who died at his home in Portland on August 26, after an illness of nearly four years.

He was buried in the cemetery on Wednesday, and lived there until a few weeks ago he moved to Portland. His first wife was Dora Winslow, but one of their children is living, Mrs. Minnie (Kemp) wife of Rev. Arthur Swift.

Mr. Kemp's second wife was Marion, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Foster. Of their children there are four living. Mr. Kemp leaves two brothers, Fred and Sidney Kemp, and two sisters, Betsy and Mrs. Nettie Pottle, many many nieces, nephews, cousins and more distant relatives.

As the greater part of his life was spent in Otisfield, he was known and highly respected by all. For many years he was deacon of the F. B. Church, a member of his family, and was also one of the main pillars of the church and was sadly missed when he moved away. The services were conducted in Portland, Tuesday forenoon, by his pastor, Rev. J. E. Peterson, and in the afternoon at East Otisfield by a former pastor, Rev. Dr. Lorimer of New York. He was laid to rest in the family lot in Elmwood Cemetery, under a profusion of beautiful flowers.

GETTING NEW BUSINESS

The progressive business firm finds that it needs to be constantly making new friends and creating a new circle of customers. If it just depends on satisfying those who have previously bought its goods, it is likely to see its trade diminished. Population changes move rapidly now than formerly, and if a firm has a certain list of customers, it can expect, as the result of all the changes that naturally occur, that a considerable proportion of those customers will not be on the list a year or two hence.

Also people are changeable in their habits, and unless a very energetic effort is made to hold old customers by advertising a lot of them will go elsewhere, attracted by the various inducements that are offered them.

People are not much inclined, as they were formerly, just to trade at one place or a few places right along year after year. They are quick to get the idea if some firm seems to be hesitating a little longer than its competitors to please the people, and no feeling of habit or sentiment of loyalty is apt to hold them, if they think they can do better by going elsewhere for something they want.

An active campaign of advertising, a firm can keep making new business friends to make up for those who drift away. It does not take elaborate persuasion to win such new customers in these times.

People are ready to go to any place of business where the spirit of enterprise and hustle seems to prevail. A concern that makes it a regular practice to advertise, even if it does not take a great amount of space, will have a constant stream of inquirers entering its doors, who will more than make up for old customers who go elsewhere.—Waterford, Wisconsin, Post.

NEW ENGLAND THANKS RED CROSS FOR HELP TO FLOOD VICTIMS

3,500 Families Aided in Nine
Months' Reconstruction Program;
Organization Spent
$1,200,000.

Letters, resolutions, and statements from individuals, many of whom received assistance from the organization, have poured into national headquarters of the American Red Cross in the last few weeks, testifying to the appreciation of the people of New England for the reconstruction work the organization did following the destructive floods of last November.

Completing expenditures in excess of $1,200,000, its workers were for nine months active in the affected areas extending financial assistance to families suffering losses when the torrential rains sent streams tumbling over their embankments to play havoc in parts of five states. The reconstruction program in New York, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts was virtually completed some time ago, but the last relief award was just recently made in Vermont, where heaviest losses were suffered.

Of the funds expended, more than $500,000 came from the national treasury of the Red Cross, as contributions from the public to the relief fund totaled only $745,173. Financial assistance was given to 3,500 families, involving approximately 15,000 individuals. This help consisted of restoring homes and other buildings, procuring household goods and furniture, providing clothing, and assisting small business men to re-establish themselves after a knock on an operating basis.

For farmers, who suffered especially heavy losses in Vermont, assistance was furnished in reclaiming land which had been washed out by the water or covered with silt, stones and other debris, providing new farms where the land was damaged beyond reclaiming, rebuilding homes and barns; rescuing farms with implements and live stock, and providing feed and seed until farmers were in a position to take care of their own needs.

In a statement commenting on this relief program among the farmers, the "New Englander of Agriculture" E. H. Jones, of Vermont, said:

"I regard the farm rehabilitation which has been made possible from funds disbursed by the Red Cross as an extremely important factor in the recovery from the flood which is being made by the State of Vermont as a whole."

"On behalf of the farmers who have received this generous assistance," he said, "I desire to express our hearty thanks and appreciation for it to go with my personal gratification that the agricultural rehabilitation of Vermont has been so liberally aided."

The Vermont State Red Cross Advisory Committee, composed of seven prominent citizens, headed by State Auditor Gates, of Montpelier, said in a formal resolution passed just prior to the closing of the work, that "the Red Cross came to the aid and assistance of the suffering people of the area, furnishing relief in emergency cases by supplying food, clothing, shelter and medical aid to the needy and sick."

"It has in a very substantial way," the resolution continues, "assisted in rehabilitating the loss and damage caused by the flood and has greatly aided in a supreme effort to restore Vermont and her people to a normal condition."

Chairman Gates, of this committee, in commenting on the relief work, said he believed that "the spirit which brought the Red Cross to Vermont stimulated rehabilitating activities everywhere in the area, and the rapidly with which we have come back is due in no small degree to the efforts of this organization. It was, indeed, a task, and much credit is due it."

Another expression of appreciation for the reconstruction work came in a recent letter to Chairman John Barton Payne, of the Red Cross, from Fred A. Howland, of Montpelier, Vermont, president of the National Insurance Company. Mr. Howland said he feels that the Red Cross "has been very generous in its handling of the Vermont situation, which undoubtedly presented new and troublesome problems somewhat different than the organization has had to cope with in other parts of the country."

Although the Red Cross has officially closed its relief headquarters in the flood area, many families will continue to receive help for some time. Approximately $193,000 will be disbursed in Vermont by Red Cross chapters within the next few months in the form of trust funds for specially needy families, and for the completion of certain relief projects now under way. This money has already been awarded to specific families, and no new or additional appropriations will be made, Red Cross officials say.

While not comparable in size to the great Mississippi Valley flood of 1927, in which Red Cross expenditures will exceed $17,000,000, the completion of the New England flood reconstruction program brings to a close the most extensive disaster relief task the organization has ever faced in that section of the country.

CAN AN OWL SEE?

Many of us have been brought up to believe that an owl cannot see in the light. Maybe so, and then again maybe not. At any rate a group of boys recently captured a common screech owl in the top of a tree on the outskirts of Philadelphia, carried him to earth, examined him closely as boys are wont to do, and then deposited him upon a low branch of another tree.

The owl flew to a branch higher up on still another tree; thence to a branch lower a few feet from his nest; and then, with no hesitancy, he dropped into the nest itself. If he could not see, he surely had a wonderful sense of direction.

A scolding does nothing else to a boy but to make him more determined to succeed. Experiences as this will help to clear his mind of the old fairy tales about our common birds and animals.

Wheel Chair Farming Unknown

Work in Field From Sun-up to Dark and do Chores by Candle Light.

Taken from Thomas' Almanac of 1826.

Below is a farm article published one hundred and two years ago. It has the ring of old times, where people respected, moral, religion and law and were not ashamed to get a bruise by toil.

The greeting, "I'll tell ye what, brother Yonkers, I'm heartily glad to greet ye once more. Our acquaintance has been so long and so pleasant, that, to me, I think a separation would be most grievous. I see ye now, what have ye been doing since our last interview? The condition of a farmer is such that he need never be out of employment. His life is filled up with care and watchfulness and continual exertion. 'O fudge,' says Mr. Bookworm, 'what has Capt. Hawgree to do in the winter, except to eat, drink and be merry, and enjoy the fruits of his summer's labor?'"

Now let me tell you, old Paragon, you know nothing about it. With all your plodding I advise you to peep a little into Dr. Dean's book. You will there learn that an attentive farmer is no idler even in the winter season.

Cow House. Farmer Fudge may turn up his nose, if he pleases, and think he needs no teaching in this matter. I shall take the liberty to give my opinion about a cow house though to be sure it is rather late in the season. The floor over the cattle should be so tight as to prevent the falling of dust, chaff, etc., and so high that a man need not stand in fear of having his head broken by it. Many of our old fashioned cow stalls or stables are none too high for a pigsty, and a man, when he would enter one must squat like a goose to save his brains. Let it be of good width also that the dung may be shoveled back and not discommoded the milkmaid. Let the windows have a good fastening and the windows good shutters to keep out the cold and storm.

Hogsty. A good hogsty is a thing of more importance than many think for. A part of it should be close and warm with a tight roof over it. The other part where the trough is placed should be open. Swine should not be wholly secluded from the weather and sunshine, and they will be injured by having cold and wet lodging. A large part of it should have a wooden floor. Some think that any sort of floor will do well enough to fat hogs in. This is a gross error. The more comfortably your hogs are kept the less nourishment they will require—I like not to see too much fat on a hog.

Asparagus. This is a most valuable plant. It is highly esteemed and easily cultivated. No green which the spring produces is of more account, and it is truly astonishing, when the farmers in the interior do not raise it in greater abundance. It serves both for meat, sauce and bread with the help of a little butter and salt. "Give me good fat pork and tater," says old Simon Watkiss. "As for your sparrow grass and your lettuce" and little fiddles I wouldn't give a snap for them. No, fags, not I. I want no such expensive niceties."

Farmer Fuddle. Farmer Fuddle rises between 6 and 7 gets on his breeches and his shoes slipped, and then "come out here Stoughton's Elks; Stoughton's Compound of Gin and Jackknife, and Capt. Blackstrap's Boot method of cutting cobwebs. O, there is nothing like it! It has a surprising effect upon body and soul, and the moment he has gobbled it down, it begins to operate, like the inhaling gas. I called on him one morning just after the second day for he takes about 7 or 8 a day, and all was in the wrong. He stormed and scolded and fretted mightily, and seemed to vent a curse upon every body and everything, except his gin bottle; and all only because a hoop had sprung from the water pump! A guinea hen was at the door and kept up a very constant accompaniment through the whole. Never was sound better adapted to sentiment, than in this duet, thought I.

The dairy. A description of an ideal dairy was given for the month of June. Butter. After the butter is churned, it should immediately be washed in several waters to cleanse it from the milk; and in working it, you will find two pieces of wood convenient to be used, for the hand is too warm and is apt to soften it; and some hands will give it a sort of greasy appearance. Now, should my lady of the chaise happen to be a snuff taker, O, in mercy deliver me from the filthy product of her dairy. "What! Mr. Saucebox," says Polly Finch, "if I can't say pudn, it's none of your business, and my fingers are as clean as any body's, I'll have ye know."

Cows. No animals that we keep are more profitable than cows. Farmers acknowledge this, yet few practice according to their belief. Some will keep seven or eight poor, miserable things, which will not average more milk or butter than two good ones, and yet how far more expensive is their keeping.

Newspapers. The stage has come, and the mail is opened! The farmer stops his team in the furrow! The carpenter lays aside his broad ax! The shoe-maker lets fall his lap stone! The blacksmith leaves his iron in the fire! The doctor forgets his sick patient! The lawyer drops his quill, and the parson shuts his Bible! Away they hurry, greedy for the news! Like hungry hounds around the shambles, longing for the first snap at the offals, they stand, and with feverish impatience, the unbending! Even old age and decrepitude has essayed to reach the place! Business is stopt and all other pleasures are laid aside until the perusal is finished. Then the farmer and the mechanic and the doctor and the lawyer and the priest and the rest of them, all retire to their different employments, no more satisfied and no more wise, than they were before, but filled with an increased longing for the next arrival of the mail!

Old Orchard. Take the whites of six eggs with a handful of fine beach sand, washed clean, stir them well together; then boil a quart of molasses down to a candy, and cool it by pouring in cider, and put this together with the eggs and sand into a barrel of cider and mix the whole together. It will keep for many years and be good enough for kings, emperors and presidents.

There is another kind of cider which some seem to prefer, and is made in the following manner, viz. Let your apples lie till they are thoroughly rotten; then take some warm dry and grind them up and immediately press out the juice, and put it up in barrels containing fly blows, rat's dung and maggots. Throw in a few handfuls of bird lime and old tobacco cuts and to each barrel five pauls of duck water. Bung it up with an old stocking, and it will be fit for use from the cask or for bottling at any time. This liquor is preferred by some people to that made in any other manner. Its delicate flavor is equal to the effluvia of a jakes; and the effervescence has sometimes been so powerful as to overturn a cart!

The Most Tidy Gave me a good sweet barrel. Take 4 quarts of salt, 3 ounces of saltpetre and 5 lbs. brown sugar. This will preserve my beef well, rich and sweet. The saltpetre and such nonsense," said Old Gobbel. Now he was worth about $15,000, and yet he would swallow a load for a nippenance. He actually once undertook to munch down a live herring for three cop-munch down a live herring for three cop-the brook, and the moment he saw the huge jaws open to crumch him, flap he went down the miser's gullet. So they cut open old Gobbel's throat and took out the fish, and he lay ill for weeks, and when he came to pay the doctor's bill, O, how he did groan! "Cheap living, cheap living," old crumuncher, gasped.

For pickling beef, for 100 lbs. take 16 lbs. fine salt—2 lbs. brown sugar—4½ gallons water, and 6 oz. saltpetre.

The Parting. Hard it is to part with friends, and hard to part with life, but there is a harder parting still with some. Wife, children, friends and even life itself are to an avaricious man, as dust in the balance, compared to his gold! On this he holds till breath departs, and even in the pangs of death, should you talk to him of charity and the wants of the poor his haggard brow is knit in frowns; his teeth gnash in anger; "ye are robbers, all," he exclaims, and casts the last lingering look of his glassy eyes upon his filthy treasures!
